Class of '24 Commencement Speaker Has Badger Roots

Fae Fox
SpringHill Now Director

Tania Tetlow, the first woman president of Fordham University stated she is "thrilled and honored" to give the Spring Hill College class of 2024 commencement speech. "I'm going to work really hard to give a good speech worthy of the graduate class," said President Tetlow.

President Tetlow stated the theme of the speech will be "thinking about Jesuit values in a way that relates to student lives." Tetlow stated she wants the students to "enjoy the moment and everything achieved, have gratitude, and courage for facing the difficult world going forward."

President Tetlow's commitment to Jesuit education began long before she was born. Tetlow's father attended Spring Hill College and her great-uncle taught at the college. Tetlow herself never attended a Jesuit college but stated, "My parents raised me nearby in New Orleans, steeped in Jesuit heritage and in awe of the heritage of Spring Hill."

Tetlow was the first woman to be President of Fordham University and quickly connected with Dr. Mary Van Brunt, president of Spring Hill College. Dr. Van Brunt stated, "Tania's commitment to the Jesuit mission and dedication to renewing and reinvigorating the higher education landscape is incredibly admirable. She has been a mentor to me as I've started my presidency here at Spring Hill College, and I know she will impart a wealth of wisdom to our graduates as they go out and blaze their own trails."

Tetlow earned her bachelor's degree in American Studies from Tulane University and graduated from Harvard Law School with her Juris Doctor. She previously served at Tulane University as senior Vice President and Chief of Staff. She began her academic career at Tulane Law School as the Felder-Fayard Professor and directed Tulane's Domestic Violence Law Clinic, for which she raised millions of dollars in federal grant funds. In addition to her extensive higher education background, Tetlow is a former federal prosecutor.

Tetlow's background in law led her to be a legal scholar who examines the intersection of equal protection and criminal law. Tetlow previously served as president of Loyola New Orleans where she led the university to new heights in enrollment and academic success. As the only other Jesuit Catholic institution in the South, Loyola New Orleans is seen as a sister school to Spring Hill. So much so, that Spring Hill College provided housing for students and staff of Loyola New Orleans following the aftermath of Hurricane Ida in 2021 and Hurricane Katrina in 2005.

With graduation nearing, senior Ronnie Bergeron shares his thoughts, "I am excited to graduate even if it is a little scary to go through the big changes after! And I can't wait to hear the speaker. I am excited to see what she has to say."

The Class of 2024 will walk on the historic Avenue of the Oaks for commencement on May 11th at 9:00 a.m. To learn more about the commencement ceremony, please visit shc.edu/commencement/

Purple Alert Instagram Admin Shares Her Story

Maddie Bouck
Reporter

Junior, Katie Conklin offered students a new way of staying up to date with other students, events happening around campus, and even the City of Mobile by launching the Instagram page "PurpleAlert" last fall. After transferring from another school, Conklin stated, "I was eager to immerse myself in campus life. However, I was surprised to find a multitude of Instagram accounts for Greek life events but none for the general student body. I had expected to find an existing Barstool Spring Hill account, but there was no such thing that existed. Some older friends mentioned there had been a few in the past, but they had devolved into platforms for gossip and negativity." Although the account is non-affiliated with the school, Conklin hoped to engage all students with a page that covers entertainment and campus updates. "As a new transfer with plenty of opinions and no outlet, I felt the need for change. I felt that because I had transferred from a different school, I was kind of unbiased and could make this a chance to be "my thing". The goal was to create a platform that dismantled cliques and enhanced communication across different friend groups, ensuring that every student, whether heavily involved or not, felt included and informed. With our school's small size, community spirit really makes a difference. The platform was designed to welcome everyone and keep them informed, and it has even helped reunite lost items with their owners, proving that we truly support each other #badgerssupportbadgers." she shared.

Since the launch of this account, formally known as @shcpurplealert, the page has a following of over 750 students. Conklin stated "Most of our posts get around 200 likes and we mostly post "almost Friday" carousels on Thursdays. Over the last 90 days, Purple Alert has reached 2,310 accounts, over 1,000 of them being non-followers. We have gotten a total of 878,939 impressions and just in the last 7 days we have reached 1,110 accounts and we are up 31% since last week. It goes up steadily every week and has been since day one."

Conklin shared that at first, the feedback was mostly negative and "hostile" messages from both students and faculty members, but she continued to post. She stated "Feedback has become more positive as I've begun engaging more with students'

Some Students Stress Over New Move-Out Procedures

Residence life move out policy raised concerns for students facing the challenges of getting home, especially students who reside out of state.

As final exams and graduation approach, students feel more stress with this year's move out policy. A few weeks ago, the Res Life staff sent out an email to all students regarding how the move out process will go at the end of this semester. As a result, not many students were happy with the contents of this email. Such as the requirement that stated, "All residents must vacate the residence halls twenty four (24) hours after their final exam." Junior Dario Hammond, who is from Tarrytown, New York, has found it especially challenging. Hammond stated, "I have to put my fridge and microwave in storage beforehand, then pack my clothes and other stuff into my suitcase. It takes me two days to get back." Hammond continued, "48 hours would be better because it gives everyone a full day to pack. Especially when I am tired from classes."

Junior Madalyn Duncan who is from Nevada, has more challenges when dealing with getting back home. She stated, "With everyone so busy, it is hard to get all of my stuff packed for the airport plus having to get certain things to a storage locker to hold over the summer. On top of that, not a lot of flights are going out of Mobile to Nevada and if they do, those flight options aren't really convenient. Last year I almost didn't have a ride to the airport to make the one flight I could get."

Head of Res Life Rapunizal Boykin stated, "The Res Life team that consists of myself and Lexus, help facilitate and create the policy and procedures. We also do a lot of research to pull from other schools on what the standard procedures are and also look at what we have done in the past and adapt to fit the current student body. Late stay requests are approved on a case by case basis. We just ask the students that they send an email to the Res Life inbox and we reply to let them know if their request is approved or not." For the graduating class, it is not an ideal process to move everything out the same day as they walk across the stage. Boykin responded, "I understand the stress. It is a lot going on at once which is why we wanted to give the checkout process out to the students a couple of weeks before so people can plan ahead." Boykin added, "It's 24 hours after the last final because we have summer housing that starts almost immediately following checkout. We hope to get a lot of the rooms turned over, cleaned and maintenance repairs and things done like that before we move students around for summer housing." Boykin ended, "The move out process is intended to not be super complex for the students. I'm excited for the senior class and for graduation, it should be a fun week, but we hope to help alleviate as much stress as possible."

If anyone has any questions about this year's move out policy email residence life at reslife@shc.edu.

Broken Golf Cart Limits Pub Safe Officer

Amanda Glowacki
Reporter

Fletcher Ross Devery, also known as Ross, is an SHC Public Safety officer who is known by students for working the night shift and safely returning students to their dorms during the night. His golf cart steering broke at the beginning of the spring semester, limiting where he can go conveniently and safely on campus.

Ross stated, "I will patrol around some, which would obviously be easier to do on a golf cart, just for ease of getting to tighter spaces on campus."

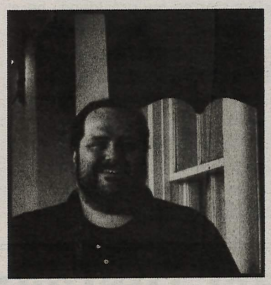

Ross currently has the option of either driving a gator, that only can fit one other person or driving the new Public Safety vehicle that can fit four people. "With street legal vehicles, you have to be on the road. Then, with the gator, it's wide enough that you can't get to all the sidewalks, which cuts off 20 to 30 percent of campus," said Ross.

Ross had a working golf cart until the first couple weeks of the spring semester of 2024. It has been with maintenance ever since the steering became an issue. Ross stated "I hope we get the golf cart back, but from what I can tell, public safety doesn't have the funds to fix it or replace it."

Ross is a fan amongst students of all grades. On Friday and Saturday nights when he is working the night shifts after he locks up Mckinney's, he goes and sits at the Fairways near the picnic table. Ross likes to do this because then he is there when people need help, instead of being 10 minutes away. Ross stated "If you need help that is what I'm here to do."

Ross is known for driving people back to their rooms late at night when they are in need of a safe ride. Ross stated, "People see the golf cart and know it's safe, that they can go up to it and talk to the people driving it."

Senior Brooke Borgmeyer stated, "Ross is a nice guy and his golf cart is iconic because it has gotten many students safely back to their dorms late at night."

Picture By Amanda Glowacki

At night there are a lot of dark spots on campus due to lack of light posts. Ross stated "Personally, I'm not sure there's any number of lights we can have on this campus that will make it bright enough at night."

This is a safety situation where Ross driving people back to their dorms keeps students safe due to the blind spots on campus, but it is difficult for him to do that now without the 'iconic' golf cart that everyone recognizes.

Ross stated, "there have been discussions about getting more lights and concerns about blind spots," but Ross does not know if that will be happening anytime soon.

For the current lighting around campus, Ross does a light survey every month to make sure they are all working.

Campus Renovations Should Preserve Its History

Mac Spiller
Reporter

As the history of Spring Hill College's campus continues to grow, the buildings that house these very memories have a tough expectation as they withstand the test of time.

Launched in 1830, Spring Hill became the first college to open in the state of Alabama. Shortly after, history was quick to sweep the grounds. In 1865 after the Civil War broke out, Mobile served as a refugee camp for Union troops. Both in 1869 and 1909 two massive fires tore down the campus. However each time, no matter the roadblocks, the school was rebuilt. In 1930's the college opened its doors to women, making it one of the first coeducational colleges in the state. Then again in 1954 Spring Hill became the first integrated college in the deep south. Through all the backlash and criticism from the decisions made in past decades, the leaders of this college have pushed on and found ways to make this campus thrive.

The historic buildings that we walk by today are sadly not what they once were. With the test of time, these buildings have severe interior damage and are only continuing to get worse. Not only are academic buildings starting to deteriorate, so are dormitories as well. This makes for unsafe living and learning conditions for the students at Spring Hill. In attempts to change with the times the college has expanded on the campus with the addition of its newest building "New Hall."

Recently Spring Hill College was granted an opportunity to modernize the campus. Just last year the college was given a $35 million grant to build a state-of-the-art health and science center. This building will be revolutionizing the way students are able to research and advance their abilities in the health and science field. However this building has to go somewhere, and it will be taking the place of Walsh Hall. Not only has this building been home to countless students since 1954, but the mailroom will have to find a new place as well. To go along with the demolition of Walsh the dormitory, O'Leary will also be removed as well.

I believe that this building is a good improvement for the campus. Multiple generations of students will be able to use this place to enhance their knowledge in areas that can be used to help others in the future. Health and science professions are greatly needed in the world to better understand how life develops.

With the new building, I can see there being a balance between keeping the history of Walsh preserved while modernizing the campus. If I was an alumni coming back on homecoming weekend, I would love to see the campus thriving along with all the memories I have made on this historic campus.

Living In The Deep South Is The Best!

Alisiah Rashid
Reporter

I think the South is the best place to live. If you are into a slow and steady paced life, living in the south will be the place for you. Most people move to the south because it is not like other places in the U.S. The weather year round is almost always warm and sunny. The people in the South are friendly and very welcoming.

The South is known for its diversity of cuisine foods such as, African-American soul food, which usually includes chicken, macaroni and cheese, collard greens, baked beans and cornbread Creole Native-American foods, such as crawfish boils, shrimp etouffee, and sausage creole jambalaya are also found in the South.

There are all genres of music in the South, but this region is known for jazz music from New Orleans, its soul music from Memphis, and of course its country music rooted in Alabama. Music brings people together, especially when it comes to line dances at events. Everyone is running to get together to have a great time. In certain areas of cities, there will be local musicians playing on the side of the streets and people often gather around to enjoy the tunes.

Another reason why living in the south is the best is because of the weather, especially if you love the warm seasons. When the weather is nice, people love going to the beach to soak up some sun. The beaches are one of the more beautiful places to go and have fun at during the spring and summer in the South. Places like Panama City Beach in Florida, Gulf Shores in Alabama, and Myrtle Beach in South Carolina are popular beaches in the South. Most people grew up going to these beaches where some families spend their summer vacations.

Cost of living in the South is very affordable compared to other regions of the United States. Mississippi is ranked 1 for affordable living, Alabama is ranked 2, and Kentucky is ranked 3. Most people move to these states to settle down and start families. The southern states are more slow paced, unlike states like New York or California.

I was born and raised in the South, specifically Birmingham, Alabama. There is nothing like a southern barbeque on a sunny day.

Badger Almuni Celebrate First Year in Business

Mac Spiller
Reporter

Spring Hill College alumni turned local business entrepreneurs celebrated BoHayden's Bar, their business', one year anniversary this past Saturday on St. Louis Street in downtown Mobile.

BoHayden's Sports Bar celebrated their grand opening in 2023 with owners and alumni, Beau Monterio and Hayden Constantine. The 2 alumni graduated from Spring Hill in 2021 with a dream to open up a bar one day. On campus, both owners were presidents of their fraternities. Monterio, an International Business and Account major, was president of Lambda Chi Alpha and Constantine, a Marketing and Business major, was president of Sigma Chi. After graduation Beau Monterio found new inspiration to kick start their dream again. "Originally when Hayden and I were in college, we always kind of talked about opening a bar in Mobile. But it got to a point where when we graduated, I went to Chicago and Hayden stayed down here." Monterio continued, "When I was up in Chicago, golf simulator bars were killing it. Everyone got into golf, and it was a huge ordeal so we were like why not start it in Mobile. People in Mobile love to drink, love to golf, let's just do it here. Why not us?" However, in one year that whole model changed. In place of the original golf simulators, a stage was built for live bands and televisions for customers to watch a variety of sports were added. As Monterio reflected on this past year, he stated, "It's been a crazy year in review but our first original idea was golf simulators so whether they stunk or not I'll always be thankful for them."

The celebration kicked off at 11a.m. on Saturday, April 20, with a full day of live band performances and all-you-can-eat crawfish. As drinks were served and crawfish was eaten, memories were shared and more were made. Members of the Bohaydens staff, Natalie Sullivan and Meghan Johnson stated, "There is great live music, and all of our friends meet here. It always makes for a good fun night." Johnson continued, "I love the BoHaydens atmosphere because all the people that started coming here have become regulars and honestly, become all of our family. We hang out with each other all the time and it's people I would have never met before."

BoHayden's has also been the host for many Spring Hill College alumni events such as the Mardi Gras Alumni party in February. With this growing popularity Monterio said, "Right now we have plans to redo our courtyard to become an indoor and outdoor area. There are plans to build a kitchen back there. We have all these plans on what we want to do to improve this building."

To keep up with BoHayden's and all the events they have each month, follow them on Instagram @ bohaydensbar. The sports bar is located on 662 Saint Louis Street.

Badgers Showcase Their Talent at SpringHilla

Maddie Bouck
Reporter

Student artists showcase their talent on campus at the first annual SpringHilla Concert on April 6 at the Fairways Apartments on the golf course.
Members of the Student Government Association (SGA) hosted the first annual SpringHilla concert as the first spring concert of the semester. The event was held at the Fairway Apartments for students to spend the night listening to the musical performances of their Badger classmates.

The SpringHilla concert was created as an outlet for students to showcase their musical talents with their peers, while also providing another opportunity to mingle in the courtyard. SGA was able to provide a real stage with colorful lights to help create a real concert experience for the campus.

SGA opened the SpringHilla setlist application to all students to help encourage a wide variety of talent and music genres. The line-up consisted of performances from student artists on campus such as, Q Steezy, Ethan Valdez, Antheo Been, Nico, Nicky Mackool, RDM, Snow Day Band, Sleez, and a special surprise song from alumnae, Sebastian Nail. Student performer, Sleez or Trey Martin, was the last act to perform of the night and showcased his song "Rubin 102," which is familiar to some apartment residents. Rachel Martin said, "When he talks about family forever, Rubin will always be family to me." Rubin Hall is one of the three apartment buildings on Fairway Hole 14, home to some junior and senior students. Sleez shared that he started his music career in highschool when he was helping a friend with their work. Sleez shared his friend's comment, "That's really good and you should try it on your own." This led Sleez to continue his music career, and has produced four albums since then over the years.

Sleez continued, "The crowd was amazing. It was something I didn't know I needed, and it just was great. Everybody was just having fun, turnt up. It looked like they were into it, so that was all I could ask for."

Junior student Rachel Martin said, "It was so cool to be able to see all of our fellow Spring Hill students perform live in front of the apartments. It was super fun. I would love to see it come back next year, even if it is not the same artists. I would love to see all the talent that Spring Hill students bring to the stage." Martin also shared how the concert was able to bring the campus together for a night and stated, "I was just enjoying the music, and I was looking around and there were so many new faces that I haven't seen, so for that event to bring in the community, it was awesome." Women's Softball Superstitions Stay to Play

Reporter

Spring Hill College's Softball team participates in pregame superstition rituals before each game, and each player has a connected meaning to their rituals in order to feel confident in their game performance.

Senior Macy Holt has two main superstitions that she practices on a game day in order to play her best for a game. Holt said, "I always have to have mascara on, but only mascara and no other make up. Then for my hair I alway have a side french braid that goes into a ponytail. Then afterwards I braid my ponytail. Then I put my ribbon in my hair and tie it like a little bow." Holt continued, "I started doing this around my freshman year of high school and I have done well since then with it. The one time I changed my hair I did horrible."

Holt is not the only one who is superstitious about how she puts her hair up for game days. Senior Lindsey Mecom stated "If I have a game and I don't do as well with a certain hairstyle, I change it for the next games." Sophomore Cat McCulley is a player who does not believe in superstitions. McCulley stated "I don't believe in superstitions and that they have an effect on how the game turns out."

Not all superstitions are meant to help make sure a player does good in a game. Leighanna Turk, a sophomore pitcher, has more of a memorial superstition. Turk, for every game day, wears a yellow patterned ribbon that is tied into a bow. Turk stated "I wear my yellow ribbon in a bow for my Pawpaw. It was his favorite color and I wear it in honor of him. He spent a lot of time with me at the ballpark, helping me grow into the player I am now. So when I wear the yellow ribbon in a bow, it still makes me feel like he is at every game with me still." Turk always has the yellow ribbon on and never changes it out for a new one. She has been wearing her yellow ribbon since junior year of high school when he passed away.

Some superstitions are shared between players. Taylor Pittman and Meadow Villar share a special moment before each game. Villar stated, "Before every game, we pray as a team, before we take the field. My best friend and I kneel next to first base and put one of our hands on first-base. Then we put our arms around each other and we pray, to honor everything we do on and off the field. We have been doing this for years."

Each player that has a superstition believes these practices will assist them in the game and impacts their performance on the field.

If you are interested in seeing their superstitions in action you can come watch them play this Saturday and Sunday against Lane at home. Or you can find another game to attend by visiting shcbadgers.com.

Serving It Up to Clench SIAC Championship Win

Nick Watts

The Men's tennis team is attempting to serve up a perfect record in their conference this season.

With the Men's tennis teams regular season coming to a close the team has seen unprecedented success inside the conference. The team has an impressive undefeated record in singles play within the SIAC conference. Accompanying this statistic is a bolstering 12-0 against conference opponents, as well as clenching the conference earlier in the season. With this year's success in the conference, it marks the fifth year in a row the team has clenched the SIAC conference under coach John Dotson .

Dotson reflected on the success of the team and said, "Getting better athletes, recruiting, I've done a good job of assembling talent. The senior leadership has been great."

Dotson is no stranger to success, as he is a Birmingham Southern College alum in 1984 when the team was ranked seventh in the nation for NAIA. He has been with Spring Hill for 11 seasons, and with the members of the team, acquired a top 50 ranking in preseason polls this season.

The team's co-captain Charles Wallace stated, "This is definitely the strongest team we've had so far in my time at Spring Hill, which is great to see. We've had some new additions this year, and we have a great No. 1, Philip Bosman who transferred from South, so definitely the strongest No. 1 we've had."

Philip Bosman was the No. 1 player in Alabama on the USTA and HEAD recruiting list coming out of high school. He currently has an overall record of 11-4 on the season as the number 1 player for Spring Hill.

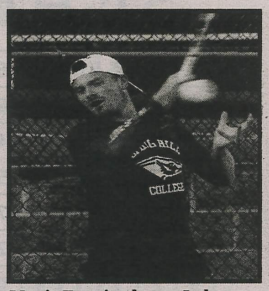

Co-captain Paul-Philip Kern stated, "It's a very friendly atmosphere. I mean we start off the season with the team meeting, one with coach, and also one without coach. And we always talk about all the rules we have, and what we expect from each other."

The tennis team has many players, not just from the United States but also from Spain, Germany, France, England, Brazil, Puerto Rico, and Australia.

The team won the conference tournament in 2023 and Paul-Philip Kern stated, "I think this year we have an even better chance to win it."

The Men's tennis team was able to capture the SIAC championship this season accomplishing one more milestone for the Men's Tennis program.

personal pages, promoting their interests, celebrating birthdays, and addressing their complaints and questions during significant events. I even live stream some events to ensure those who can't attend can still participate. The type of feedback I receive largely depends on what I post, but that is dependent on what you submit to me, and the current happenings around campus." Conklin shared how she strived to promote student-based interests and accomplishments to help engage a larger audience.

She stated, "This page acts as a hyper-local news source that students can interact with, addressing specific issues in real-time. The name "Purple Alert" has grown increasingly appropriate as it bridges the gap between school news and social events. It has become the go-to source for all things concerning Spring Hill students, offering straightforward updates without the hassle of clicking through links or reading a paper. All the essential daily updates are provided directly in your stories, continuously refreshed to keep you informed."

Senior Nate Sobek shared how he felt about @ shcpurplealert's content, "As someone who isn't affiliated with Greek life or sports teams on campus, this account is a great and easy way for me to know what's going on and what's new with people."

Some students may recognize the name "Purple Alert" as a school code for displaying signs of unstable mental health. Conklin said she felt this way when the original account, known as @ barstoolspringhill was removed for "Copyright Violation". She shared how the new name came about, "It had to be something about Spring Hill without saying Spring Hill and something that represented something of a meme page with a serious undertone. Purple Alert was the name we stuck with. It was the funniest. Although the name is silly, there is nothing but good intentions." Conklin stated.

Conklin shared that despite the added daily stress, and pressure to deliver the best content, she is rewarded with positive interactions from the student body. "My favorite aspect of running the page is the trust and reliance people place in me. It's incredibly rewarding to know that you guys feel comfortable approaching me with personal issues, looking to me as someone who can offer solutions or at least some form of support. This trust has deepened my connection to the community and gives me a sense of purpose, knowing I can make a real difference in day-to-day lives," she said.

Conklin continued, "I intend to hand over the account credentials to a select group of individuals who I believe will maintain the original spirit and purpose of the page." Conklin shared her hope for this account as though it has already made its mark in student history. "Ultimately, continuing this page could raise overall morale, increase school spirit, and strengthen our community making sure everyone is having a good time on The Hill." Conklir stated.
