PERSONAL PROJECT · ORIGINAL PILOT

Timeless Shores

Pilot Script Draft

GENRE	FORMAT	STATUS
Family adventure · time travel	Television pilot	Draft

Logline

Two siblings dig up a strange device on the beach behind their house and are flung across time — from a 1920s carnival to the age of dinosaurs — racing to find their way home before their parents ever notice they're gone.

Characters

Chrona (14) — serious, focused, always the one with a plan.

Kairos (11) — carefree, impulsive, chases crabs instead of treasure.

Excerpt

FADE IN:

EXT. EUREKA POINT BEACH – SUNRISE

Waves crash against the shore. The sun rises over the small coastal town of Eureka Point, casting a golden glow on the dunes.

CHRONA (14, serious, focused) kneels in the sand with a METAL DETECTOR, scanning methodically. Beside her, KAIROS (11, carefree, impulsive) chases a crab.

CHRONA

Kairos, could you please focus for five minutes?

KAIROS

I am focused. On not dying of boredom.

The metal detector BEEPS.

CHRONA

(leaning in) Wait. Got something.

Kairos immediately darts over, digging enthusiastically, and pulls out a RUSTED METAL OBJECT.

KAIROS

An ancient artifact! Or... a rusty can.

Kairos's hand brushes against something else buried. He freezes — a METALLIC DEVICE covered in strange SYMBOLS, sleek and totally out of place. He presses a button. A faint HUM begins, the air SHIMMERS, and the siblings DISAPPEAR.

EXT. 1920S EUREKA POINT – NIGHT

The siblings land in the middle of a bustling carnival — bright lights, jazzy music, colorful tents. A CARNIVAL BARKER shouts nearby.

CHRONA

(whispering) In the past. And we need to get back. Now.

…continues through a prehistoric-era climax and a mysterious final image: a stranger, MS. CALYPSO, watching from her window, holding a device just like theirs.

Craft Notes

Built around sibling voice contrast (Chrona's focus vs. Kairos's impulsiveness), a classic three-act structure spread across three time periods, and a planted mystery hook — the stranger with a matching device — meant to seed a larger season arc.